Along the southern boundary, and sometimes within the WSA, is the International Fuelbreak. This is a strip of land from which heavy fuels have been removed. It is maintained by the California Department of Forestry to reduce the spread of fires. At the summit of Otay Mountain, but outside the boundary of the WSA, is a major communications site which houses transmitters and antennae for radio and microwave communications. This is a critical facility for numerous law enforcement, utilities and business communication networks. The private lands to the east and north of the WSA have been developed for some agriculture and an occasional residence, though much of the land remains undeveloped. It may be expected that residential development will continue to encroach on the WSA making fire control more important. Minerals The WSA has no known mineral resource values. Speculation for gold, silver, and perhaps lead has prompted several mining claims to be located on the WSA. Overall mineral potential is believed to be low with little development expected in the future. Grazing 2,840 acres (50) of the Otay Mountain allotment is within the Western Otay WSA. This is a 5,522-acre allotment which provides 222 ALIMs of forage. Wildlife The area is part of the Otay Mountain National Cooperative Wildlife Management Area. A variety of species inhabit the area, including mule deer, bobcat, ringtail cat, California quail, morning dove, and rosy boa. The WSA may also provide foraging andor nesting areas for raptors such as gold eagle and...
