The urea nitrogen was determined generally by the method of MORNER and SJoQUIs r, sometimes also by the method of BOHLAND. By the former method a considerable quantity of any allantoin present is estimated with the urea, and by the latter method all is probably so estimated. The results of the earlier analyses were rejected, as the amount of fluid taken (5 c.c.) proved to be too small to yield an adequate amount of ammonia for accurate titration., Generally the urea results by BoHLAND s method were considerably higher than those by MoRNER s, especially in the case of the allantoinic fluids.
