Excerpt: . . . that her strongest wish might be fulfilled, and that they two might pass their lives together with a fair semblance of peace, if not love. As if this period were to be folded like an idyll between tragic pages, she was summoned to the Red Hall ere her husband had wearied of his new domesticity, or sought for any fresh amusement. The Squire, unwilling to acknowledge that he could no longer face wind and weather, had gone about his usual avocations during the bitter gales of an inclement February. Cold and a low fever had so reduced him that, about the middle of March, Mrs. Ramsay telegraphed to her niece to come home at once. She received the message at breakfast, and Ainsworth delayed going to the barracks for a few minutes to talk it over. He was surprised to see how quietly she...
