Not illustrated. 1915 Excerpt: .Attempts have been made to measure the current intensity of a flash of lightning, and a more or less satisfactory estimate, based upon calculation and measurement, has been obtained, but aside from this there is almost no exact knowledge of lightning except that inferred from points of similarity between lightning and other electrical phenomena with which we are familiar. The need for spreading information on the subject of protection against lightning is also very apparent. There is a widespread popular notion that lightning rods are quite expensive, and at best not as inexpensive as fire insurance. The extent to which this idea is erroneous will be brought out hereafter in this paper. There is also a great need for emphasizing the fact that not every artisan who can scale a building is a fit person to plan and install a system of lightning rods. Although a system...
